Park plan okayed

Canyon's new parks and recreation board, after several meetings for organization and general discussion, agreed on a plan Friday to build some parks and recreation facilities.

They didn't, however, entirely agree on a timetable for action, with one member urging that they begin immediately with the city funds now available while another appeared to favor holding on to the funds to use for matching money in a try for large state grants.

After discussion of several sites, the board agreed to build four baseball diamonds in the east section of town, on city land near the waste treatment plant, build another football field at Conner Park, locate a mini-park in Hunsley Hills and approach the schools about jointly building tennis courts at the high school.

The next step is to get cost estimates for the project and Chairman George Ritter and the two members present, Mrs. Aubrey Crossland and Phil Langen, divided the task.

Originally, the board had hoped to get the cost estimates, put together a plan and present it to the city commissioners in time to submit an application to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission by mid-December for matching funding.

However, they conceded Friday that it was unlikely that they could meet that deadline now.

Langen pushed for immediate action with the money the city has already committed during the next budget.

"Are we going to hold back the $10,000 promised and put with this grant, or are we going to use it to take care of immediate needs?" he asked. "I like the overall plan, but I foresee us sitting here and planning for two years before we see a tap of land turned."

"After we get the cost figures and see what it is going to run, let's do something," Langen urged. "Even if it's just a mini-park, let's do it so we can show that the parks board is doing something besides planning."

The city's $10,000, even combined with $10,000 that may be available from the schools is not enough to finance any improvements, Ritter said. Ritter appeared to favor a try for massive funding, possibly through a bond issue, and said this would not create a delay.

Ritter has in mind a total project of about $500,000, with the city paying half of that.

He told the board that this could be financed at one time, with a bond issue, or it could be spread over several years, with the city allocating about $50,000 a year.

They could also spread the project out over many more years if funds are not made available, he said.

"With an April bond issue, if it passes, we could have four new ball diamonds in operation by June," he said.

Ball diamonds were a major concern of the board. Langen was alarmed by the possible impact of the new development of a long vacant block alongside the present diamond.

"What I see is the new creation of a problem that we didn't think we'd have this quickly," Langen told the board. The extension of a street through the lot will increase hazards to youngsters chasing foul balls and auto lights will shine in the players' eyes, he told the board. Furthermore, buyers of the homes under construction there are very likely to complain about the foul balls, which he said will "bombard" the houses.

One of the major reasons the board agreed to locate the ball parks in the eastern part of town was to help alleviate traffic problems.

Ritter reported to the board on discussions he had had for acquiring land near Conner Park to add an additional 10-acre oblong west of the present boundary. He also pointed out several sites in Hunsley Hills that have been offered. The board took no action on land and mentioned viewing the sites before they discussed the matter further.

Local lawyer one of few in specialty

A Canyon attorney is one of only two attorneys in the Texas Panhandle to achieve certification as a criminal law specialist under a new Texas State Bar program.

Harris Hampton, who practiced in Dallas before coming to Canyon in 1971, was informed last week he had successfully completed the requirements for the specialization certificate awarded by the bar under a new program.

The only other Panhandle area attorney to achieve the distinction is Andy Shuval, district attorney in Deaf Smith County.

Hampton met all requirements for the specialty and most recently passed a written examination administered by the bar in Austin to about 100 criminal attorneys from throughout the state.

Hampton said Thursday only a handful of the original candidates for the specialty will be awarded certificates by the bar.

The certification is good for a five-year period, at the end of which it must be renewed.

A certificate of special competence is to be awarded Hampton in Austin ceremonies at a time yet to be released.

The new specialty program involves certification of attorneys as specialists in criminal law, family law and labor law.

Hampton said the program is an effort by the state bar to allow attorneys to specialize in particular fields of law in their practices and to give to the public some indication that attorneys designated through the certification program are specialists in particular fields.

The tests administered in August in connection with the program and the certification of Hampton and others in the state who met all requirements mark the first time in the state's history that legal specialists have been recognized publicly.

Hampton predicted, though, that the trend toward specialization in the legal profession may some day approach the specialization already achieved in the medical profession.

"Lawyers should specialize," Hampton said. "I wouldn't have any idea what to do with some things, like abstracts."

While law school students, he said, are required to gain a broad comprehension of the entire legal field, it is usual for attorneys once graduated to become entrenched in one particular type of law.

So, in fact, he said, lawyers for years have been specializing on their own, but the public has not recognized that fact.

To gain the certification, Hampton's past record as an attorney was reviewed. He had to have been in the practice of criminal law for at least five years prior to request for certification, and submitted outlines of all criminal cases he'd handled in the last two years.

Hampton graduated from the (See LOCAL, Page 10)

Try expected for liquor vote

A group of West Texas State University students is expected to make a serious drive after Jan. 1 to call a local option alcoholic beverage election in dry Canyon.

No formal action has yet been taken by the group, but The News has learned a serious attempt at calling an election will be made with the opening of the spring semester at WTSU.

Charles Cogdell, a WTSU student, confirmed Thursday he and several other students are now getting organized to begin what he hopes will be a successful campaign to vote Canyon wet in the spring.

Two previous student-promulgated attempts at calling a similar election have failed since 1972.

However, during the same period of time, Umbarger and South Amarillo portions of Randall County have voted themselves into the liquor business.

Previous efforts in Canyon met staunch opposition from several local church leaders and groups. "We are serious about it," Cogdell said Thursday. "We'll be a larger group and it will pass."

Cogdell said initial efforts will center on signing up students and other Canyon citizens as registered voters. A follow-up campaign will be made to obtain more than 700 names of registered voters on petitions to call the election.

County Clerk LeRoy Hutton said the campaign could run into trouble early on because of a court battle emerging downstate over a new Texas voter registration law.

Under a law passed last spring, Texans are required to register to vote before the end of December. However, a federal district judge downstate issued an injunction withholding the law from taking effect recently and throwing the voter registration procedure into turmoil.

Mrs. Audrey Bruse, tax assessor-collector, said the state secretary of state's office has informed her that until the downstate litigation is completed, voters will continue to register under the old law, which provided for once-only registration.

Hutton said would-be petitioners must present an application for petitions on the local option issue with the application included the signatures of 10 qualified voters in the area.

Once petitions to call a local option election are issued by Hutton, he said, they must be returned with the required number of valid signatures within 30 days.

A state law passed two years ago by legislators requires that petitions to call a local option election must contain the signatures of registered voters, the addresses of the voters and the voter registration number of the voters, all written in one hand.

To call an election, the petitioners must gain fewer than 1000 names on the petitions, the number corresponding to a number representing 35 per cent of the total votes cast in the 1974 gubernatorial election.

Hutton said it is usual that about one-third of the signatures on petitions are invalid for one reason or another.

Local option petitions, he said, can call for voter approval of any number of activities, including sale of all alcoholic beverages.

Elections in Umbarger and in the South Amarillo area two years ago approved the sale of all alcoholic beverages including mixed drinks in both areas.

Elections can be called by petition in either a justice of the peace precinct or in a municipality.

A student group three years ago tried to raise enough signatures on a petition to call an election, but the effort failed in the Canyon area. The petitions were never turned in.

Another effort was made in fall of 1972 by a WTSU student. That effort shifted to South Amarillo, where the issue passed, but petitions failed in Canyon.

Local church leaders mapped opposition plans to the petition effort on the first attempt three years ago.

New school is being designed for individualized instruction

The elementary school Canyon officials are planning to construct next year will not only be new in the brick-and-mortar sense, but it will also provide for the full implementation of a new kind of teaching.

Mrs. Vondean McGregor, elementary curriculum director for the district, said individualized instruction will come into its own in the proposed new elementary facility which is now on the drawing boards.

A teaching concept used by several teachers in the elementary and junior high school now, individualized instruction will be the planned for curriculum at the new school, she said.

Currently, Mrs. McGregor is working with B.R. Cantrell, an Amarillo architect, and other officials to complete the design of the building.

Canyon taxpayers will go to the polls Dec. 9 to decide whether $6 million in bonds should be issued by the school district to finance construction of the new elementary school and a new high school.

Preliminary drawings of the elementary school indicate it will be a radical departure from the old box-type classroom configuration.

The design is to fit the new curriculum, Mrs. McGregor said, but classrooms in the building could, if necessary, also be used as traditional classrooms.

At one end of the proposed structure will be located the cafeteria, an all-purpose room, and music area. At the other end will be offices for administrators, teachers lounge and other administrative rooms.

In between, though, will be the heart of the new school.

On one side of the building, the third and fourth grade "pods," areas which are designed to be open and centered in a circular fashion around a central teacher workroom.

Three open classrooms — that is rooms without full walling, — will be allocated to each grade in each pod.

On the other side of the building will be the fifth and sixth grade pods, similarly constructed around a central teaching workroom.

In the center of the building will be a library and media center, again with open walls for free access, a first and second grade pod, which is more a rectangle than a circle, and a kindergarten pod.

"The whole idea is not just economics," Mrs. McGregor said, "but it is more economical construction with fewer inside walls and more use of space because there are not all the walls between the classrooms."

What the school will have, Mrs. McGregor says cautiously, is open classrooms.

"That word has had connotations for some people," she said. "People think there's no control. But, that's not the point. Whether a building is open or closed has nothing to do with the discipline of children."

Mrs. McGregor feels the openness of the classrooms is a key to the concept of individualized instruction she hopes will be implemented in the new school.

Under the individualized instruction concept, a child in first grade may be assigned his own teacher, but he, because of particular skills or needs, may be assigned to a second grade teacher.

Robert Friemel was among those Umbarger Community residents slicing it to the bone on Thursday as the final phase of the traditional German Sausage Festival was completed with the sausage making activities. The total community was involved in the effort with dinner to be served at the parish hall from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. today, Nov. 9.

Sausage, kraut waiting at the Umbarger festival

Sauerkraut is ready — Sausages are sizzling —

And the serving lines open today at 11 a.m. for the annual Umbarger Community's German Sausage Festival where the traditional hospitality of a good meal and other entertainment will treat local and area residents to a "swell time."

The annual feast of sausage and sauerkraut from special German recipes will be complemented with homemade breads, green beans, applesauce, tea, coffee, milk, chocolate milk and topped off with homemade brownies for dessert.

Dinner tickets will be available at the door from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m. at $3 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12. Pre-schoolers will be fed at no charge.

"It takes a lot of sausage and sauerkraut these days to feed folks," related James Skarke and Joe Grotgut, general festival chairmen. The folks at Umbarger have 370 gallons of kraut to serve and 3,300 pounds of sausage ready.

"Back in 1952 when this festival got started it was a fund raising affair for the parish of St. Mary's Catholic Church," they related. "And through the years it has grown into a community wide festival with proceeds still going toward the upkeep and projects of the church."

The sauerkraut has been fermenting for about eight weeks under the watchful eyes of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Kock, chairmen, and the sausage links were stuffed in the final phase on Thursday under the guidance of Johnnie Wieck, chairman.

After dinner, the Umbarger folks will have other entertainment available for folks including browsing through the Country Store amidst baked goods, sauerkraut and sausages; or stepping into the Bazaar where gift and novelty items will be sold; or taking a pole to the fishing pond for entertaining the youngest festivalgoers; or waiting a minute for the giveaway drawing being handled by John Beckman; or lingering for the evening dance to wind up the festivities.

The Country Store will be offering take-home portions of sausage and sauerkraut for festival patrons according to Mrs. Max Hoffman, chairman. The 52 oz. tubs of kraut will sell for $1.25 and the sausage will be $2.50 per

Reading the vote

The results of Tuesday's election superficially tend to contradict the results of an election held three years ago concerning the desires of the people of Texas for a revision of their Constitution.

In the earlier balloting, voters by a large margin approved setting in motion a mechanism for change in the 100-year-old document.

In the Tuesday balloting, voters overwhelmingly defeated the results of that process.

Does that mean Texans are now convinced the state does not need a new or revised Constitution? Or does it mean they are now convinced that the process used to come up with a revision proposal was invalid?

If state officials believe, for whatever reason, the former is the basis for the utter lack of popular support for the proposed new Constitution, they undoubtedly will drop any idea of constitutional revision for at least a generation.

If, however, they believe that the Texas voter was disgruntled when he went to the polls on Tuesday because he was presented a document for consideration which had been brewed by legislators and believed the testimony of opponents that legislators bent the revision to their own self-interests — and therein lay his chief objection — then constitutional revision might be considered a live issue still.

We don't, of course, know why voters opposed the Tuesday proposals. But, we're not convinced that the vote should be interpreted as an absolute negation of the vote taken earlier in this decade when the people of Texas said they wanted constitutional revision.

It would be short-sighted, we think, for state leaders to drop constitutional revision altogether due to the Tuesday vote.

The people, for example, might be a good deal more receptive to a revision proposal which was concocted by folks from among their own number. A citizens convention, much like the one held in 1876, might be more to the liking of the voters.

We believe the Texas Constitution is in dire need of revision. And, we don't think it responsible to dump revision because the people have rejected one document proposal.

We urge state leaders to reconsider revision in the near future, possibly with the idea of presenting to the voters another proposition asking whether they, too, still believe revision should be examined.

Tuesday's vote was not a mandate that revision be junked. — C.W.

Fair play needed

If it is not the school's responsibility to instill in a child a sense of fair play, it is at least a school's responsibility not to negate what sense of fair play a child may have.

Fair play seems to be getting a rough going over in Canyon High School recently in the application of school dress code standards by school officials.

Mrs. Jim Madewell pointed out to school board members Tuesday night more than 2300 violations of the boy hair code in the 1975 high school annual.

Her point: her son's picture was deleted because his hair, too, was in contravention of the rules.

The hair code is this year being more strictly enforced, we understand, with classroom inspection tours. Yet, we've seen football players whose hair obviously violates the code.

If the hair code is to remain, if it is to remain what it has become — the school board's manifestation of iron-fisted authority — it must be enforced with equity. Fair play must prevail. — C.W.

Where's Lindsay now?

Random thoughts:

What's happened to John Lindsay, wonder-boy mayor of New York City during the soaring '60s? Whatever the mechanism found for bailing the Big Apple out of its financial woes, we hope Lindsay is made a part of it. It is a tenet of accountability that he who messes something up should at least help straighten it out.

While principles in the Watergate fiasco publish their memoirs, while her father prepares his own manuscript for posterity, Julie Nixon Eisenhower has produced a volume of her own — a children's cook book which one reviewer says is more likely to inspire "yecchs" than raves from the younger set. We trust it contains her daddy's recipe for Eggsicle Omelet, Big Enchiladas, Perfectly Clear Casserole, Plum-ber Pudding and Watergateau Riche. A certain entry from Dad must be his famous recipe for Cooked Goose. — C.W.

The graves on the hillside
The first Cemetery in the panhandle

By JUDGE L. GOUGH

This excerpt was taken from the Randall County Story, compiled by the late Mrs. Grace Warwick:

(The material taken from the files of the Panhandle Plains Museum Library, and assisted by Mrs. Newton Crain, librarian.)

"In 1881 a man with whom no one was very well acquainted worked on the T-Anchor Ranch. An iron grey horse called 'Bob' fell on him. The crude nursing of the cowboys could not save him, and he died. The fellow went by the name of Misner. We never did find his people and knew very little about him. He had a little bank account, which is still in the account of Gunter and Munson.

"In 1882 Robert Truvy and his wife were keeping the ranch house, and in that year a baby came to them. The child died and was buried over on the hill by the side of Misner. Van Stickle dug the graves. Mrs. Truvy had skinned buffalo until two days before the baby was born and began skinning two days after the baby's birth.

"In 1885 two men came through who were traveling for their health. One died of tuberculosis, and he was buried over by the hill. I believe the Historical society would do well to locate these graves and mark them.

"A party came through on their way to Tascosa. A Mexican with them was drowned in the Tierra Blanca, and they buried him over by Misner.

"This is the history of the first burial ground in the Panhandle."

The Randall County Survey Committee has tried to locate these graves as have others, but so far have not located the graves.

City Desk

By CARROLL WILSON

One sin of modern architecture in this day of ever-higher construction costs is that it has sacrificed on the altar of austere functionalism many of those things about which architecture should be particularly concerned.

Aesthetics, for example.

To be more specific, several buildings either now completed or about to be constructed in Canyon are aesthetically distressing.

West Texas State University's proposed new fine arts building is to architecture what cacophony is to music.

The City of Canyon's new city hall would be better at home on the French Maginot line, 50-calibers thrust from its barren walls.

Randall County's new courthouse annex — well, what can you say about the aesthetics of a box?

I concede that sterility in architecture is largely a result of economics. Lack of funds dictates the use of certain materials and the use of certain designs which do not, apparently, lend themselves to creativity. Economics, then, is a reasonable excuse for a terrible-looking

Our world

Ease burden of others

By ANN BROWN

It is difficult to find a big daily newspaper that does not record a mass killing somewhere in America. As a rule, the slaughter is not generated by malice but by frustration.

Many times the killer did not even know the victims. Driven out of his mind by personal pressures, he simply went berserk and vented his frustration on family, friends, or strangers.

It is understandable that the killers are almost always men. American men are convinced they should be able to cope with everything.

To admit they need help would be an admission of failure, so troubled men usually push themselves until they die of heart attacks, collapse in mental hospitals, or go berserk.

Women who are ill physically or emotionally are prone to seek help.

About four out of five men who ask for medical help or psychotherapy are dragged to the doctor's office by their wives. That could explain why the beserk killer is usually a single man.

Shared burdens are never quite so heavy as the ones we must carry alone.

Probably no person ever lived who did not at one time or another need somebody's help.

Most American men, however, have been made to feel that they must not exhibit any of the weaknesses common to all. This puts burdens on them few men can successfully bear.

There is no individual or group of individuals who can lower the pressures on our society. All we can do is try to reduce our personal pressures, and refrain from exerting pressure on our associates.

But, let the environmentalists fight that battle. I am more concerned with a more ephemeral wasteland to which people who must operate without windows must be exposed.

Casting aside the economic arguments for lack of windows in many buildings, notably schools and classroom buildings, I think the urge to build structures without windows symptomatic of our modern age, an age in which man feels himself isolated from his fellow man, an age in which man might view a window less as a medium to look through to the outside than as a medium through which he can be spied upon, an age in which only one window, the TV screen, is important as a link to reality.

The lack of windows is symptomatic of an age where efficiency, if not achieved in reality, is at least a proclaimed goal of society, where man is guilt-ridden if caught day-dreaming.

Buildings, I assert, need windows, if for no other reason than that they provide the vehicle for man to engage in reverie, for man to think briefly, for man to unburden his mind for a time, if only a moment, to reflect on himself, his work, his future.

Hospital planners, I'm told, are well aware of the very human need to be able to look out a window and tell something about what's going on outside.

They speak of the lack of windows as a form of "sensory deprivation."

Schools, particularly, need windows. I note with some chagrin that current plans for the Canyon School District's new elementary school call for few, if any, windows in classroom areas.

How well I remember sitting in Bivins School, my desk turned to the south, and my eyes only half-focused on small puffs of cloud which passed over the wind-torn trees on Fannin Street. My thoughts, of course, were not on mathematics, or English, or science. They were, rather, turned inward, providing introspection which is enormously valuable to a growing and maturing being.

Letters to the Editor

Hair policy called unfair

Dear Carroll:

It has come to my attention that an impression of my motives in dealing with the school board could be construed as an advocacy of long hair.

This is a misconception.

I am completely uninterested in the length of anyone's hair except my own sons.

My contention is that the hair code in the Canyon schools is not and cannot be administered fairly.

My son, David, was omitted from his senior annual because the person who could omit him did not like him. He participated in all school activities and was never sent home to get a haircut. If his hair was all right for school, it should have been all right for the annual; but it was not all right for the annual then David should have had the opportunity to have a new picture made. This request was denied by the school principal.

We went before the school board and they refused to even review our case.

When the annual came in I looked it over carefully and with the school code to guide me I found over 2500 infractions of the hair code. These are quite obvious to anyone who looks at the annual.

These pictures were not omitted, but David's was. I only enumerated these instances to show that David has not been treated fairly.

This fall the school board added a new wrinkle to the code enforcement. They had a form printed up and distributed it to teachers, and the teachers had to turn in anyone who did not measure up to a code that is impossible to enforce fairly and is easy to use to harass students.

Then, if this were not enough, school administrators (usually the assistant principal) made the rounds of classes looking for code violators.

If the assistant principal likes a certain boy his hair is in compliance no matter what the length. (I can name at least two boys who came under this category.)

If the assistant principal dislikes a boy, he harasses him. (I can name at least one boy who came under this category.)

The assistant principal goes to a class, surveys the room, and drags any student he says is not in compliance out of class.

The student is taken to an empty room where he is told that he is under suspension, is truant from his classes; and because he is truant, he has three points taken off his final grades.

He is left in this room without supervision. He is not allowed to leave to get a haircut. He is not allowed to call his parents.

I went before the school board on Oct. 21, and asked if they knew that at least 35 minutes of class time had been spent checking hair and Tom Keeling said, "That's all right."

Then I asked if students were not being held in "on campus suspension" so the school would not lose its average daily attendance money.

He refused to answer my question, was extremely rude to me, and told me to leave.

I am not intimidated by him, so I prepared a statement which I read accusing the school board of the things that I have explained in this letter.

Mr. and Mrs. Brito Valdez

Thank you

Dear Editor,

We would like to thank all the people in the community, the clubs and the associations who worked so hard to help my son, Ricky Valdez.

Ricky received so many nice cards and letters and we appreciate them all and wish we could answer each one but there are so many, we can't.

We also appreciate so much the many gifts Ricky has received and want to thank those who have remembered him.

Ricky is back in school and is doing well. He is continuing medical treatment.

We appreciate so much the prayers everyone has made for Ricky and may God bless each and everyone that has helped.

Mr. and Mrs. Brito Valdez

Board rude!

Dear Mr. Wilson:

We were shocked after reading the report on the Nov. 4, 1975, Canyon School Board meeting and the conduct of the Canyon Independent School District's elected officials toward a concerned parent. Have they as responsible, elected officials established a reputable example for the students attending the CISD or do we have a double standard?

Window-gazing, day-dreaming — they give us pause to enjoy ourselves, to allow the whirling brain to slow, to become knowledgeable about our own beings.

Another of modern architecture's trends has been toward the replacement of windows with little knick-knacks like artificial flowers, with colorful wallpaper and wallpaper patterns, little items where, efficiency experts might argue, a weary mind can focus for a moment to regroup.

And, that may be a workable substitute, although still a poor one we think, for windows. Engineered reverie. Plasticized day-dreaming. "Management," these contraptions say to us, "recognizes that occasionally employees will be human and take leave from their work for moments at a time to simply stare into space. Therefore, management has arranged pre-selected plastic plants for such foolishness."

Plastic flowers are poor substitutes for the trees on Fannin Street, which moved only so gently in Indian Summer, leaves turning day by day from green to orange and then brown. Striped wallpaper is, too, a poor substitute for slow-moving clouds, forming little dogs over here, a giant duck over there against a background of blue.

As windows let the light in, so do they let the spirit out, to float, to grope, to examine itself and the things about it.

A windowless classroom, a windowless office building, strait-jacket the consciousness.

The delicate flower within, after all, must also have the sunlight.

What I have set forth is accurate.

It is obvious that the school board is not interested in what is right, and has no conception of fair play.

If this body of men is so narrow and mean in this instance, how can anyone expect any different behavior and actions from them in any other instance?

With frustration,
Vivian Kay Madewell

Friendly town

Dear Sir,

Last August we had the pleasure of being in your town. We had come to see "Texas." Just as we got into town our motor home broke down. We were directed to Randall's garage and told to see Merle Pitts. Well, our motor home breaking down turned out to be one of the nicest things that happened to us. Merle was so helpful. He not only promised to fix our motor home the next morning, he tried to get us a ride to see "Texas." He was obviously very proud of "his" town and the play. We were unable to see "Texas" that night so he gave us a place to park on his lot over-night.

I cannot say enough about how helpful and friendly Merle Pitts was to us. He got right to work the next day on the motor home. He suggested we go to the museum which we did. We spent three hours there, fascinated. Everyone by this time knew of our problem and knew us. Your town is the most friendly we encountered on our trip out west and we certainly shall plan to visit it again.

If you were ever to give an award for "public relations" I vote for Merle Pitts. If he is any example of the rest of the people in Canyon you have indeed "Texas" most friendly town. Thank you Merle Pitts and Canyon for one of the most memorable stops on our trip.

By the way we saw "Texas" the next day and it was spectacular. We had heard about the play in Florida. I am so glad we saw both "Texas" and Canyon.

If ever any of you are in Daytona Beach, please stop and say hello and we will try to show you some of our town.

Very truly yours,

Official Stays in Office Reluctantly

Before that, he had gone to State Rep. Bob Simpson of Amarillo last spring hoping Simpson would push a constitutional amendment to allow McClendon's office to be abolished.

Neither strategy has worked and McClendon, a full-time attorney in Amarillo and Canyon, says he'll have to wait two more years for another legislative session before he can try again.

Armed with what he believes was a mandate from the people to do away with his job, McClendon says this time he hopes Simpson will be more amenable to his request.

Simpson failed to support McClendon's effort in the last session, according to the treasurer.

The resounding defeat Tuesday of the proposed new Texas Constitution left Bob McClendon still holding keys to an office he'd rather not have.

McClendon, elected county treasurer in November 1974 after promising he would try to abolish his office if elected, had originally hoped the local government propositions on the Tuesday ballot would pass to facilitate the abolition of the office.

D'Arcy is about to lose her first tooth and it's the most exciting thing to happen in our house since Julie colored Hubby's favorite necktie.

Only a few years after we'd broken D'Arcy from sticking her fingers in her mouth, she's been walking around with her index finger jabbed like W.C. Fields' cigar in the front of her mouth.

She tells everyone she meets about the big news.

"Guess what?" she asks cooly, wiggling her front tooth back and forth. "I've got a loose tooth."

We've called all the grandparents, aunts, uncles, cousins, and other acquaintances to tell them the latest development. Whenever the phone rings, D'Arcy is there at my side tugging at my sleeve and yelling "Tell them. Tell them."

The lady who called to offer me a year's subscription to The Welding Journal for half-price was a little dazed when I replied, "No, thanks. Oh, by the way, D'Arcy has a loose tooth."

The kid has also pressured me on how much the Tooth Fairy pays for teeth.

She's been checking around at school and found that the Tooth Fairy doesn't always pay the same. Her investigation revealed that the usual price for a tooth is anywhere from 25 cents to a dollar. I guess the TF is a victim of inflation, too.

D'Arcy has decided to hang onto her tooth until the market is good. She wants a dollar. I wish her luck. I'd like a dollar myself.

She's been going through the toy catalogues picking out the things she can buy if she gets a dollar for each tooth and saves it all.

"A dollar is a lot of money, dear," I've explained patiently.

"Oh, yea," she replied after we looked at the catalogues, "then how come you can't buy anything with just one dollar?"

I'm afraid we've let D'Arcy get a bit carried away over the whole thing. After all, the tooth's not even out yet.

Hubby wants to tie a string to it and then tie the string to a door-knob. He says that way if it hurts he escapes responsibility and you can always blame anything on an inanimate object.

I'm more the take-a-bite-out-of-an-apple type. But, as loose as it's getting, a banana would do.

It doesn't really matter how or when it comes out to D'Arcy. The fact that it's loose means she's getting older. Growing up.

I had forgotten how important being snaggle-toothed was in kindergarten and first grade.

It's a milestone, you know.

"I sure am getting big, huh, Mom?" D'Arcy asked with a big grin, her loose tooth dangling.

Yep, she sure is.

Heart Unit's Cyclethon Riders Raise $3,657.29

Randall County unit of the American Heart Association has collected $3,657.29 from the fall cyclethon fundraising efforts of local citizens, according to Reggie Reeves, unit president.

The tally of funds was made at the unit's regular business meeting earlier this week and winners from the cyclethon were determined through total funds raised by individuals in each of four divisions.

Nicky Coleman was named to receive the elementary division prize of a Western Flyer bicycle from Western Auto of Canyon.

In the junior high division, Ronnie Hoyl was named winner to receive a John Deere bike contributed by Texas Tractor Company.

Joe Watkins received the citizens band radio furnished by CB Center for the high school-college level winner.

In the adult division, Weldon Trice was the cyclethon rider earning a 100-pound beef package furnished by the Happy Hereford Ranch.

"We were real pleased with the cyclethon and want to extend our appreciation to the 89 riders who took pledges and rode to earn our funds this year," stated the chairman.

In other business, the unit made plans for blood pressure clinics to be held later in November. Final plans on the free clinics will be released as soon as final arrangements are completed.

Student Hurt In Collision

A Canyon high school student was slightly injured Wednesday in a collision about 1:45 at 9th and 23rd Streets.

Zady Lin Caldwell, 17, was taken by ambulance to Palo Duro Hospital where she was treated at the clinic and released.

Miss Caldwell's auto, traveling east on 9th Avenue was struck by a car going south on 23rd Street, driven by Donald Ray Byars of 13 Country Club Drive in Canyon.

Both autos were extensively damaged, according to police estimates.

Charges in the accident are pending.

CHS Wins At FTA Meet

Canyon High School's chapter of Future Teachers did well at the district FTA convention held Tuesday at West Texas State University.

Students topped the title of "Mr. FTA" and the office of historian, and the CHS scrapbook earned a rating of one and a trophy while the school mini-tour project took a trophy with a two rating and the yearbook received a two rating.

Rick Mantooth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ricky P. Mantooth, defeated two other finalists to be named District XVI Mr. FTA. The senior, who earned a $100 scholarship in the district contest, will compete in Houston in February for the state title and

Fog Blankets Missing Wreck

Police are still curious about a wreck reported during the soupy fog that blanketed the city early Thursday morning.

Answering a wreck call, the police car could find no sign of the reported accident and inquiries to the hospital revealed no recent injuries being treated.

In fact, it appears that Canyon motorists were extra cautious during the fog, for, except for the mystery wreck, no other mishaps were reported.

Looking over the winning exhibits of Canyon High School's Future Teachers of American chapter are Bryan Young, who was elected district historian, and Rick Mantooth, chosen district "Mr. FTA."

BSP Chapter Discusses Our Country

A correspondence from Bill Ross of the International office of Beta Sigma Phi was read titled "Heritage Heart Beats" and a special thank you letter for the chapter's recent effort in connection with the Ricky Valdez project was read to members.

The chapter discussed the "Operation Headstart" and a motion was made that each member buy a Weekly Reader subscription for a child there. The children, all four years or younger, will also be receiving toys from the chapter members. The next meeting will be for turning half gallon bleach bottles into holiday toys for the children.

Present for the meeting were Ernestine Costley, Velta Horde, Sue Michael, Nell Sims, Marge Sharp, Virginia Costley, Kay Thomas and Bettie Hunter.

Books will be mailed to elderly persons or shut-ins who can't visit the library under a project funded by the Friends of the Library.

Dr. Pat Sullivan reminded members at the Friends' meeting Thursday to publicize the known project.

To borrow a book by mail, just call Mrs. Ralph Huntington at the library. Dr. Sullivan said. Postage is paid by the Friends of the Library.

Farmers Union Meets Monday

New officers and directors of the Randall County Farmers Union will meet at 7 p.m. Monday to draft resolutions to be sent the Texas Farmers Union for inclusion in state policies for the coming year.

The meeting will be at the home of Leroy Lamb. New officers and directors were elected by the membership Monday night at a dinner meeting here.

Bob Henry was named president and other officers for the year will be Johnny Wieck, first vice president; Jerry Schneiderjan, second vice president; and Mrs. Joy Davis, secretary-treasurer.

New directors are Peewee Friemel, Jim Thomas, Frank Davis, Alfred Buecker, Leroy Lamb, Earl Lamb, Edgar Robinson, and Clarence Beckman.

Buecker has served as president during 1975. Pete Fischbacher has been first vice president, Thomas has been second vice president, and Mrs. Chris Thomas has been secretary-treasurer.

Kenneth Moss, director of field operations for the Texas Farmers Union, was keynote speaker at the Monday night meeting.

tor; J.B. Roberts, director; Craig Howard, school representative; Janice Williams, school representative and Dr. Pat Sullivan, director.

Mrs. Harter To Lead Friends Of Library

Alex de Tocqueville's study in the 1830's of democracy in America was the first book written from direct observation of a democracy since Aristotle described the Greeks 22 centuries earlier — because there had been no democracies since then to describe. Dr. Duane Guy told members at the Friends of the Library meeting Thursday at the community center.

The library patrons reviewed the classic work, elected officers and, following a brief tea, toured the new library facilities opening soon at the civic complex.

Mrs. Linnie Harter was elected president for the coming year, succeeding Boone McClure. Also elected were John Childs, first vice-president; Dr. Walter Juniper, second vice president; Mrs. Audrey Sanders, secretary; Irby Carruth, treasurer; Dr. J.B. Roberts, director; and public school representatives, Janice Williams and Craig Howard.

Outgoing treasurer Conway Kuykendall reported that the Friends attained 195 members last year and has a bank balance of $577.47.

The report of projects during the year included providing books at the hospital, for the elderly and for shut-ins and organizing story hours and youth discussion groups at the library.

The project to provide books for jail prisoners was not completed. Dr. McClure reported, as he said, "the sheriff didn't think his shut-ins should have the books."

In a brief review of the two-volume "Democracy in America,"

Dr. Guy, chairman of the history department at West Texas State University, called the book as relevant for the 1970s as it was in the 1830s.

De Tocqueville, who came to this country to study the penal system and ended by studying the entire national political and social system, was an aristocrat, Dr. Guy said, and a democrat of sorts.

"He would, I suppose, be considered a liberal aristocrat," Guy said.

Convinced that democracy was the wave of the future, he wanted to find out what Europeans had to look forward to as democratic government spread.

The French writer identified the passion for equality as the central theme in American life and felt that, at least in theory, this emphasis on equality and majority rule could never be reconciled with the goal of individual freedom, Dr. Guy said.

In addition to equality, De Tocqueville also identified a strong desire for wealth as one of the major influences in national life and felt that mass production would give rise to a new aristocracy of manufacturing that would be one of the harshest in the world.

De Tocqueville further feared the tyranny of majority rule, Dr. Guy said and warned "if free institutions are destroyed, it will be attributable to the omnipotent majority."

While the writer strayed in some of his assessments, particularly of the role of the president, Dr. Guy said, his work still holds tremendous importance today.

"Of all the interesting things I've done since I was Miss America, very few give me more pleasure than telling others about Vanda cosmetics."

"I think that when someone learns how important it is to look, and feel, their best, all the time, they should tell others. Beauty's important to me, so I naturally want to share what I've learned about Vanda Beauty Counselors and the really affordable products they sell. You can't get these cosmetics in stores — only person-to-person, directly from someone as excited about them as I am. It's having a friend bring new ideas into your home. It's you putting aside a few minutes just for yourself. It's showing someone else you still care."

greenhouse until the second term begins at West Texas State University. She said furniture is needed to furnish the home for the school teacher and daughter. Mrs. Sawvell said detailed information about the four arrivals is sketchy at this time, but that the two students were in the Vietnamese Navy and now desire to go to school. The local church began seeking a Vietnamese family or group to bring to Canyon last April. Mrs. Sawvell said the church will be largely responsible for the four Vietnamese but will depend on the APC for support. Canyon has already become home for several Vietnamese students and a family. er during specific times during the day so he can work at his skill level. Or, with the open classroom concept, the individual talents of teachers can be utilized in different classrooms during the day. "Not all teachers teach everything well," Mrs. McGregor said. "If you have a really good art teacher, she can go around the pod and help in other classes."

Certain group activities could also be scheduled by the teachers in different pods since walls are no hindrance to group get-togethers. Teachers, Mrs. McGregor said, will be extremely important in the new building with the new concept. They will be forced to plan together for the teaching of children in their pods, and their individual talents will be utilized to a greater extent.

The individualized approach to teaching, an approach which recognizes the needs of specific children, has evolved to answer the problems created by traditional classroom settings, where teachers are virtually forced to teach to the median children while the slow learners and the bright students are bored, she said.

Teachers who will be assigned to the new structure will be volunteers, Mrs. McGregor said, because many teachers now in the school system agree they would not function well in an open classroom situation.

If the December bond election passes and construction of the new building is authorized, officials currently plan for construction to begin next May. Cantrell has estimated the cost of the building at $1.4 million, excluding the cost of a site. School board members have not yet decided where to locate the new elementary school. Two offers of land have been made, both in the north part of the school district. Two citizens advisory groups have recommended the elementary school be built in the north part of the district.

University of Texas with a bachelor's degree in government and English in 1956. Following graduation he worked for a book publishing house and an airline. He also served a stint in the U.S. Marine Corps. In the mid-1960s, Hampton decided to obtain a law degree and in 1967, he graduated with a doctor of jurisprudence degree from Southern Methodist University.

Immediately following graduation, he came to Canyon where he practiced for only about six months before returning to a criminal practice in Dallas.

He returned to Canyon in September 1971 "because I was tired of the big city," and joined the staff of then-Dist. Atty. George Dowlen.

In February 1972, Hampton opened a private law office. He and his wife, Gloria, have two children, Cindy, 16, and Kelly, 13.

Policy Overhaul Asked By WT Faculty Council

West Texas State University Faculty Council members ignored the warnings of one of their constituents Friday and approved a 16-point policy recommendation calling for a major overhaul of the promotion, tenure and student evaluation system.

Dr. Jim Underwood, who has gained fame recently for his work on a Mars mapping project, warned the council that administration-sponsored student evaluation of faculty has led to an erosion of grading standards at the university. Underwood urged the present student evaluation system be junked.

But, the council, in a marathon four-hour meeting, voted instead to adopt without major alteration 16 recommendations from a three-man subcommittee. Seven of the 16 proposals, all of which will be forwarded to President Lloyd I. Watkins, concern student evaluation of faculty and, according to subcommittee members, those seven recommendations virtually stipulate the council recognizes the only useful purpose served by student evaluation of faculty is to provide vide input on teaching effectiveness to a university-wide tenure and promotion on selection committee.

Among the recommendations approved by the council are proposals which, if okayed by university officials, would require students to sign a detachable portion of their evaluations of faculty; would require uniform standards to be set for the selection of faculty to be promoted or granted tenure in all committees which consider the issue; and would remove the graduate dean from the university promotion and tenure committee.

Nine of the 11 faculty council members met behind closed doors prior to the posted 3 p.m. Friday meeting time. Dr. Walter Shelly, council chairman, and Dr. Darrell Munsell, a representative from the College of Arts and Sciences, were not in attendance at the pre-session. Nor was the press informed of the earlier meeting time. Shelly said during a break in the session which began at 3 p.m. that he had been informed of the earlier meeting at 2 p.m. Friday.

Underwood, a full professor of geology, presented study data which he said indicates the value of student evaluation of faculty is not clear.

He said the stated goal of student evaluation of faculty at WTSU has been to improve teaching effectiveness and not to measure that effectiveness for use by university committees.

"But, the administration has made no effort to see if the teaching effectiveness has improved," Underwood said. Indeed, he said, there is some evidence that student evaluation of faculty has had an opposite effect.

"There is a strong feeling among some of the faculty that the quality of instruction has declined in that some have said to me the numbers of term papers assigned might have been reduced, exams reduced, and I have some reports of outright tampering with exams," he said. "I can't substantiate these — they're all hearsay — but I feel when people of good conscience in good faith remark about this, this is a matter for concern."

Another strong point against student evaluation of faculty, Underwood said, is the unusually high rating which most professors obtain from students.

"They're (ratings) way up there and I think that shows a lack of discrimination on the part of students," he said.

Underwood questioned why the university administration has chosen to implement only one form of faculty evaluation — that of student rating of instructors — while other forms are also available such as peer evaluation, ex-student evaluation, and professional evaluation.

He said the great universities in the country do not have administratively-sponsored student evaluation of faculty.

Underwood said he does not urge the demise of student evaluations, but, instead would recommend the use of individual student evaluation by the professor to truly aid in increasing teacher effectiveness.

Following Underwood's presentation, the council subcommittee, consisting of John Reeves, Ronnie Waide and Jim Woodyard, presented a two-page report for consideration.

Without much discussion, the following recommendations were passed by the council for presentation to the president: The proposals have in some cases been paraphrased:

*Standards for promotion which are clear and which have been communicated clearly should be given the faculty. Standards used by the university committee should be the same as those used by the school and college committees and by the department heads.

*School and college committees should have primary responsibility for screening and ranking faculty for promotions. School and college committees should list candidates for each rank in the order of promotability, and give clear and convincing evidence justifying the ranking. The university committee should then evaluate the rankings of the lower committees. If the university committee disagrees with a ranking recommended by a school or college committee, the lower committee should be allowed to present other evidence of justification, or to change the ranking. A compromise committee should be formed if the two committees cannot agree.

*Procedures for submitting candidates for promotion should be uniform in the schools and colleges.

*Regulations and procedures for the university promotion and tenure committee should be spelled out and given the faculty in the spring term of the evaluation period. No changes in procedure should then take place until after the evaluation period has ended. For the current year, rules and regulations should be distributed before the opening of the spring term.

*Student evaluation of instruction should be available for two summer terms and two semesters each year.

*Participation in student evaluation should remain voluntary, but the university committee should not use the resulting university averages because they will be abnormally high.

*Student evaluations should count no more than 50 per cent of the teaching effectiveness. The balance shall come from other sources.

*A standardized faculty evaluation sheet for use by all department heads should be developed.

*The student evaluation form should be revised with particular emphasis on a new rating scale.

*A system of measuring scholarly achievement should be developed to allow for comparison of different disciplines.

*The procedure for determining university, school and college, departmental goals and criteria must be the same and the evaluation of such goals must be uniform.

*Voting membership on the university committee should be 50 per cent faculty and 50 per cent administration with the removal of the graduate dean from the membership.

*University ratings compiled by computer will be returned only to the faculty member. Any other reports which go to the administration will not be identified by course number.

*If teaching effectiveness is to count 60 to 80 per cent as elected by faculty member, it should count this much and the procedures for utilization of this figure should be clearly stated. Figures derived from this procedure should be used in all rankings for tenure and promotion.

*Student evaluations should be signed much as the secret ballot is signed on a detachable form. Students should understand that they must be able to substantiate their comments and ratings.

Eagles Win

The Canyon Junior High ninth grade White football team ended their season last Thursday with an impressive victory over the Pampa ninth grade Blue team, 28-6.

The White Eagles had their best season since the program of having two teams in the ninth grade began three years ago. This year's team played eight games, with six wins, one loss and a tie. Teams played were from Pampa, Hereford LaPlata, Hereford Stanton, Bushland and Amarillo Highland Park.

In Thursday's victory, touchdowns were scored by Lonnie Shaw on a sweep around the left end and Shaw also scored the PAT to make it 8-0.

Frank Palmer scored on a pass from Larry Whitson to make it 14-0 at the half. The third touchdown came on a screen pass from Whitson to fullback Dan Gerald. The PAT failed.

Pampa then scored on a pass and the Eagles finished the scoring on a reverse by Shaw and the PAT by Terry Rudd to make the final score 28-6.

The team effort was sparked throughout the game by the play of Kelly McRoberts, Bruce Higgins, Jimmy Green, Kelly Stapleton, Kelly Thomas, Dink Funk, Chuck Scott, Toby Cox and Russell Parker. The quarterbacks Larry Whitson and Charlie Childs both performed outstandingly, according to coaches Ken Williams and Bobby Byrd.

After the game, the entire team enjoyed a hot-dog supper and celebration at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Childs where coaches Williams and Byrd expressed their thanks to team members and their parents for their support, cooperation, and effort in making this season the very best ever.

BEAUTIFUL WAS THE word for the seven-week trip through the South and East that Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Roberts recently enjoyed. Driving, with time for side trips to crafts shops and sights that caught their fancy, the Roberts traveled through the Ozarks and on to Tennessee, stopping for a visit at Mr. Roberts' home near Jackson, Tenn. in the west, then traveling on across the state to the rolling Cumberland plateau near Nashville and on to the Smokies to Knoxville.

There they found the most beautiful fall foliage of the trip. Mrs. Roberts reported, surpassing even the autumn leaves of New England. On their way to Vermont, they stopped off in Williamsburg, visited Monticello in Charlottesville, Va. and toured the nation's capital city.

They returned leisurely, by way of Kentucky and again drove through the Ozarks. Except for a bit of rain and cold during one week, they found beautiful Indian summer weather, which enhanced the lush autumn scenery. But, although the Eastern autumn is lovely, Mrs. Roberts said, it is always good to return to the Panhandle, which, in a different way, is just as beautiful.

MITCH AND DEBBIE Newkirk of northwestern Arkansas are in Canyon this week to visit with their parents and friends. Mrs. Newkirk is the former Debbie Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E.E. MRS. MARION GEORGE of Canyon recently won first prize in sculpture at the Amarillo Fine Arts Association Best of the Southwest show. She has just completed a memorial plaque for the First Presbyterian Church in Pampa and is currently working on wood carvings for the Greek Orthodox Church in Amarillo. She maintains her studio in Canyon.

Supper Discussion For CB Group Here Buffalo Breakers CB Club will have a salad supper meeting for members and prospective Thursday evening, Nov. 13, at Fellowship Hall of the First Christian Church of Canyon, 7:30 p.m.

The meeting will include a discussion of "ways to work with and benefit our local police department," according to Carl Miller, club president.

All residents interested in citizens band radio activities are encouraged to attend the discussion and supper. Each participant should provide a salad or covered dish to serve their family.

Finding new materials and ideas to improve reading skills is one of the never-ending tasks of the teacher but Rex Reeves teachers frequently band together in after hours workshops to share projects and ideas. In a workshop last week, teachers Ann Read, third grade; Mary Townsend, first grade, Janelle Hicks, first grade, Vondean McGregor, curriculum director; Maxine Sherrod, second grade and Carol Ratliff, first grade, work together.

Parents' Help Asked

School Parking Is Police Problem

Parents picking up their youngsters after school at Rex Reeves are causing problems for the police.

Canyon Police Chief Al Stewart says the difficulty comes when motorists park along the midsection of the school blocking all four lanes of the one-way 22nd street.

This results in youngsters weaving through four lanes of parked cars and would prevent emergency vehicles such as ambulance and fire trucks from using the street, he pointed out.

Stewart urged drivers picking up school children to go all the way to the south end of the school before parking and to use only the parking next to the curb and the lane next to it. This will leave two lanes free for traffic, he said. Police distributed letters several weeks ago to parents, spending two days outside the school during the rush times of 11:30 and 3:30 to hand out the letters as parents picked up children, Stewart said.

For a few days after that, drivers used the two curbside lanes, he said. But, rapidly, the problem became as bad as before. Blocking the street is dangerous and illegal, Stewart warned, and he urged drivers to cooperate with police in solving the problem.

"If people will follow our suggestions, then we won't have to give out traffic citations for illegal parking," Stewart said.

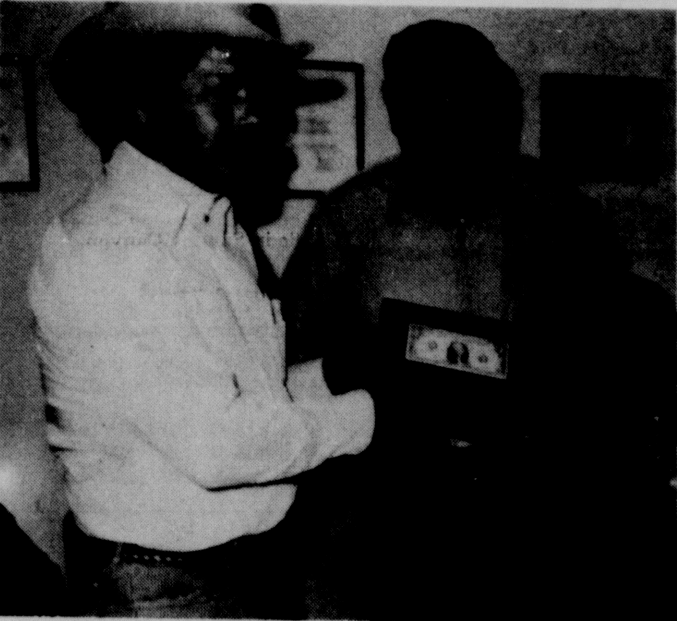

Yet, if drivers persist in blocking all four lanes, then police will issue citations, he said. "And we don't want to do that."

In his letter, Stewart said:

"There have been many complaints regarding the blocking of all traffic lanes in front of Rex Reeves elementary School when picking up our children. This practice is not only illegal but far more important it is very dangerous for our children going in and out between vehicles. This practice also prevents emergency vehicles such as ambulances and fire vehicles with necessary access.

"The Police Department asks your cooperation in taking up only two lanes. Please use only the parking lane next to the curb and the lane next to it. Please use all spaces available by driving up to the south end of the school. We realize that parking is a problem and do not want to resort to issuing traffic citations."

Parsons Retires From Highway Dept.

Chesley Johnston, maintenance department foreman for the Canyon division of the Texas Highway Department, presented special gifts to E.J. Parsons, right, at his retirement party recently.

E.J. Parsons was honored with a retirement party on Friday, Oct. 31, at the Texas Highway Department division in Canyon where he has been employed in the maintenance department since 1953.

He served 22 years with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation prior to the recent retirement.

Parsons has two daughters, Joy and Susie, and one grandson, Steve. He and his wife, Osce Lou, will be relaxing and enjoying retirement. They reside at 700 21st Street in Canyon.

At the retirement party, Mr. Parsons was presented with a bag filled with $50 worth of bi-centennial silver dollars and received a framed $1 bill from Billy Charles Mayfield as a special gift. Chesley Johnston, maintenance foreman, presented the gifts and a special diamond shaped retirement cake decorated with miniature vehicles and traffic signs was served to fellow members of the department.

Eagles' Victory Won't Take Title

Canyon's Eagles won their second district game Friday night in Kimbrough Stadium here, but their hopes for a share of the district crown were shattered 60 miles away as Perryton downed Dumas 13-12 to clinch the title.

The Eagles, after a wet and gruesome loss last weekend to the Perryton Rangers, came back strong during the first half Friday night to lay a 23-0 win on the Muleshoe Mules.

It was the second win in district action for Canyon and the second win of the season.

In Dumas Friday night, the Rangers, trailing by a 12-7 margin with only three seconds on the clock, came back quickly and put the final six on the scoreboard to down the Demons 13-12 to clinch the crown.

Canyon will finish its season next weekend with a road trip to Levelland.

The Eagles played heads-up ball against the Mules, stifling tendencies shown throughout the season to fumble and commit costly errors.

Canyon's offense showed its strength on the first possession of the game, taking the ball on the Eagle 37 and moving to the 20 before being stopped by the Mule line.

With 6:35 remaining in the first stanza, End John Prater took the ball on a fourth down situation and lost three yards to force the Eagles to turn the ball over to the Mules.

But, Muleshoe never got an offensive drive started during the first half of play, and a minute later Canyon again had possession 10 yards behind the mid-field stripe.

A key play in the series came when Quarterback Allen Shankles kept the ball and headed around left end to the 15 yard line for a 28-yard pickup. Kenny Basinger banged the line for runs of four, three and one yard, with Ricky Cooper adding 3 and Gary Ward adding 2 before Basinger took the ball up the middle the final two yards for the score, the first of the night for Canyon.

With 1:25 remaining in the quarter, Canyon owned a 6-0 lead. A Cooper kick was no good.

Within a minute, the Eagles had their second score as Ronnie Howell caused the Mule running back to lose the ball and then the Eagles recovered on the Mule 12-yard line.

Shankles hit Prater in the end zone for the final 10 yards on a first down situation and the kick by Cooper was good to make the score 13-0 for the Eagles with 26 seconds left in the first period.

Midway through the second period, Canyon got its next big break as the Eagle defense held a Muleshoe drive attempt at the 33, forcing them to kick to the Canyon 29.

Shankles broke loose on the second play from scrimmage and jaunted for 31 yards to the Mule 42 before being stopped. Cooper on the next play took the ball over the right side of the line, then cut sharply to the left and ambled the final 42 yards for the score.

His kick was good and with 6:36 remaining, the Eagles had a decisive 20-0 lead.

The second half saw the Mules come out stronger on the offense and defense, and the third quarter was a stand-off.

But, early in the final quarter, the Eagle defense forced the Mules to punt to the Canyon 15.

Cooper and Shankles, alternating at the quarterback slot, marched the Eagles downfield with the big play of the series coming on the first down situation with Cooper going over the right side for 47 yards.

The Mule defense bogged down the Eagle offense, though.

Going somewhere? Or been? The Canyon News wants to know about it — and so do its readers.

several plays later at the Mule 10 and Cooper booted his first field goal of the season to give the Eagles their 23-0 margin with 7:25 remaining in the game.

Throughout the night, the Mules failed to penetrate the Canyon 20-yard-line.

Canyon's offense turned in its best performance of the year with 351 total yards, including only 11 in the air.

The Mules had 192 yards with 85 of them in the air.

Cooper was leading rusher for Canyon with 149 yards in 12 carries, followed by Gary Ward with 62 yards in eight carries.

Leading Mule groundgainer was Quarterback Carey Sudduth with 34 yards.

Sudduth went to the air 26 times during the game, hitting on 12 for 85 yards.

Cooper tried the aerial route six times, completing one for one yard and having one pass intercepted. Shankles went to the air four times, completing one for 10 yards.

Canyon had 17 first downs for the night, compared to 10 for the Mules.

The bazaar at the annual Umbarger German Sausage Festival will feature such gift items as stuffed toy animals, knit and crochet gifts and a variety of quilts as displayed by Mrs. Joe Wieck, bazaar chairman.

Annex Gets A Look

Randall County commissioners will formally inspect the county's new courthouse annex building in Amarillo at 9 a.m. Monday before a full day of meetings in Canyon.

The inspection tour should mark the end of construction on the $600,000 structure which will house a branch tax office, sheriff's office and offices and room for Justice of the Peace W.W. Hancock.

Panhandle Engineers and Contractors of Amarillo turned in the low bid of about $576,000 for the project.

Following the tour, commissioners will return to Canyon to pay monthly bills and consider other business.

They are to canvass the election returns from Tuesday's special constitutional amendment election at 11 a.m.

At 1 p.m., commissioners will begin scheduled business.

Bob Davis of Underwood, Newhouse and Co., Inc., of Amarillo is to present a maturity schedule on refunding certificates of obligation totaling $600,000 for construction of the annex into bonds.

Other matters relating to the refunding of the certificates will also be discussed.

Dist. Atty. Randall Sherrod is to meet with commissioners to discuss salaries for personnel in his office.

The purchase of two radar units at a cost of about $4,000 for the Department of Public Safety units in the county will also be eyed by commissioners.

A proposal from Metropolitan Ambulance Service of Amarillo to operate a branch service with one ambulance in Canyon at a cost to the county, the City of Canyon and the hospital district of $3,665 per month will also be discussed.

Commissioner Paul Lindsey agreed last week to canvass officials from the city and hospital district concerning the Metropolitan offer. Currently, the Canyon Ambulance Service costs the three governments a total of $3,000 per month.
